"Why didn't I marry Mirandy Howe?" exclaimed Hiram Hostetter, flushing angrily, in response to a taunt from the hostler. "Spose you ask Milt Burgess over there why he didn't marry her?"

The little crowd loitering in front of the livery stable in the country town pricked up its ears and concentrated its interest on the hostler and Mr. Hostetter. Mr. Burgess, in the meantime, becoming more intent upon the corn-cob pipe he was laboriously constructing.

"How's that, Milt?" inquired the hostler in the same taunting tone. Evidently he knew more of the inner history of Hostetter and Burgess than the others did, for they were all curiosity, and had no comments whatever to make. Both men were considerably past middle age, and had come to the town several years before from the hill country, bringing no credentials other than a desire to better their condition and a fair ability to do so. They were sober, honest and industrious, and beyond that their acquaintances took no concern. The hostler, in his more prosperous days, had made a number of trips into the hill country, buying horses, and had heard some of the legends of that section.

"Oh, you got it out of Hi, if you kin," responded Mr. Burgess, without looking up from his work.

"I never did hear the straight of it," said the hostler, the taunting tone giving place to one of soft persuasion, "and I'm sure these gents ought to know it, just for the sake of your reputations. Don't you think so?"

"Well, I ain't objectin'," admitted Mr. Burgess, "if Hi wants to tell about it."

"You tell it, Milt," pleaded Mr. Hostetter.

"No, you do it, Hi," insisted Mr. Burgess. "I kin make a better cob pipe than you kin, but you kin out-talk me. You know that's what Mirandy allays said."

Mr. Hostetter's face flushed, partly with pride, partly with embarrassment.

"Ef you really want to know the perticklers," he said, "and Milt's willin', I reckon I might as well tell it so's you'll git it korrect. You see me and Milt was both a courtin' Mirandy, fit to kill and murder, and it was nip and tuck atween us for two year or more. As Milt says, I was a talkin' er man than him, but he owned a farm, and there is women that sees more in a farm than per-lite conversation, other things bein' equal. As for me and Milt, disrespective of substantial, Mirandy liked me—"

"Hi was a heap site better lookin' them days than he is now," explained Mr. Burgess, whose personal beauty was not, to put it mildly, exactly phenomenal.

"Much obliged, Milt," said Mr. Hostetter modestly. "But as I was sayin', Mirandy kinder liked me a shade better, and with that and my talkin' I was neck and neck with Milt's farm. It kep' gittin' from bad to wuss twixt me and Milt, though we'd been pardners for years, so's to'rds the last we got riled every time we met up with each other, and folks begun sayin' there was as likely to be a funeral on the creek as a weddin'. Mirandy seemed to enjoy it, smilin' fust one way and then t'other, aggin' us on all the time."

"Mirandy could be the aggravatin' est critter," commented Mr. Burgess half to himself, and dreamily, as out of the dead past.

"Much obliged, Milt," acknowledged Mr. Hostetter. "As I was sayin', things kep' gittin' more skeow-wowed, and me and Milt kep' likin' er closer and closer, and like as not we'd a clinched some day right where we met, but Mirandy packed up her duds and went over into the ad'jinin' county to teach winter school, and when she was gone me and Milt shied off for awhile and didn't have no grievance agin' each other—leastways not in sight. Mirandy, so we heard, had a sight of beans where she was teachin', but she never told nobody at home about her business in that line when she come back, three or four times, visitin'. The school lasted three or four months, and when it was out Mirandy showed up agin', and was just as smilin' at me and Milt as ever. Smilin', I reckon, fer before we knowed where we was at, we had fit tooth and toe nail for her, right in the road. Neither one of us got the wust, but both of us got it purty bad, and so we agreed to shoot it off with our shotguns and settle it for once and all."

Mr. Burgess stopped work on his cob pipe long enough to chuckle audibly at something or other which Mr. Hostetter's remarks had suggested.

"Much obliged, Milt," said Mr. Hostetter, smiling himself. "As I was sayin', we agreed to shoot off the prize, and the live-man left over was to git the gal. You see each one of us was bettin' odds that he was the chosing people."

Again Mr. Burgess chuckled audibly.

"Much obliged, Milt," said Mr.

"Much obliged, Milt," nodded Mr. Hostetter in full sympathy with his late antagonist. "As I was sayin', we stood there waitin' with our guns cocked and drawn tight to our shoulders, and the general superintendent begun to count—1—2—3—and we tuck sight with intent to kill. The superintendent stopped at three, holdin' the hat ready to drop and say 'fire,' when all at once there was a rustle in the brush, and Mirandy come boundin' thrugh and landed smack between the muzzles of the guns."

"Dern of I didn't think it was an angel drapped out of the sky," exclaimed Mr. Burgess, feelingly.

"Much obliged, Milt," responded Mr. Hostetter. "As I was sayin' Mirandy landed right betwixt us and throwed up one hand."

"What air you plumb ijits goin' to do?" says she, lookin' first at one of us and then at t'other.

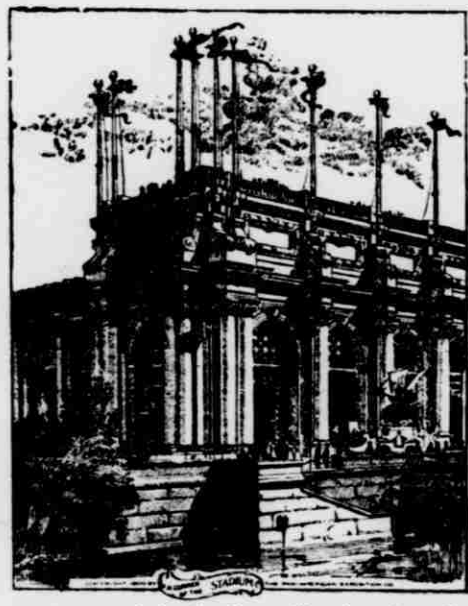

"Goin' to shoot each other, said the superintendent, bowin' low."

"What fer?" says she, lookin' at us."

"For you, says I."

"For you, says Milt."

"Then she laughed so loud and Hostetter. "As I was sayin' when we agreed to the shootin' proposition, we got a second apiece, and a kind of a general superintendent to manage the match, and we picked out a nice quiet place over in Brand's Holler, where there was a moonshine-still once, and nobody had ever been there since the revenges had scattered it to the four winds, and wasn't likely to go, it was so dern lonesome. In course, we swore everybody to eternal secrecy, but there's no tellin' how leaky a bar'l is till you put water in it. Anyway we was on hand prompt, fer we meant business, didn't we, Milt?"

"Ruther, I reckon," responded Mr. Burgess to Mr. Hostetter's appeal. "An' we wasn't no cowards, neither."

"Much obliged, Milt," said Mr. Hostetter, gracefully. "As I was sayin', we was there prompt and the general superintendent ranged us up about 20 feet apart and give orders that we was not to shoot till we got the word 'Fire,' after he had counted three, and drapped a hat."

"There wasn't no foolishness about it, neither," put in Mr. Burgess, "fer me and Hi seen to it that they didn't put up no job on us by not loadin' the guns' right, fer when they handed them to us, sayin' they was all right, we poured a handful of duck shot in each bar'l, so's there wouldn't be any mistakes."

"Much obliged, Milt," said Mr. Hostetter. "As I was sayin', we was to shoot at the word and we stood lookin' at each other with murder stickin' out all over us till you could 'a scraped it off with a chip. When a man is bad in love he's the wust, I reckon. Anyway, we never said a word; no hand shakin' no nothin'; just cold killin' was what we was there fer, and we was goin' to have it. Our seconds kinder dallied around as if they was waitin' fer somethin', but we stood there waitin' fer the word to shoot."

"It gives me gooseflesh to think about it, even this fer off," commented Mr. Burgess, with a shiver.

kinder raw that it shuck the bark off a hickory tree standin' jist by the edge of the clearin'."

"Well, gentlemen," says she, startin' to git out of the way, and talkin' in reg'ler book landwidge and as perlite as a basket of chips, 'don't let me interfere with the festivities, but before actual hostilities begin, I think I owe it to each of you to say that you had better go over to Pleasant Ridge, first, and shoot John Henshaw, for I am going to marry him next Tuesday, Providence permitting. Fire!"

"Mirandy stood lookin' at us, the superintendent snorted, the seconds laid down in the weeds and rolled over, and me and Milt shuck hands and walked off the field, not sayin' a dern word to nobody, and we didn't go to the weddin', neither."

"It's a affidavit fact, gents," corroborated Mr. Burgess.

"Much obliged, Milt," said Mr. Hostetter. "It shore is."

Take A Chance.

W. Howard Ogborn, a drug broker of Cincinnati, O., has printed on his business card this verse:

A man may work and a man may slave,
His fortune to enhance;
But he never will get rich, you bet,
Unless he takes a chance.

Mr. Ogborn, if he practices what he preaches, must be a policy player.—Caxton Caveat.

A New York Man Tells a Story.

At an informal set-down the other night of a few professional men is New York, one of them said:

"I see that Bret Harte is coming back to the United States, and that he will visit some of the former scenes where he found his best stories. Bret Harte is like all Americans who go abroad to live. There comes a time when they want to get back home. They know that they can always find a hearing here. I suppose that Bret Harte, however, will find some changes in the section of the country where he met the characters and saw the scenes which made his stories so well liked by all Americans. Other writers have been in the field, and if they have not told what they saw as Bret Harte would have done, they have at least taken off the edge, and Bret Harte will have to draw on his imagination if he gives us anything original as a result of his revisit."

"I was out in the Sierras last summer, but I saw only one character whom I think Bret Harte would have enjoyed as a matter of business. He was a young man, who, having touched all sides of mountain life, at last settled down in a place where the inhabitants seemed to have huddled in order to rest, as a minister. They told me he was an all-round minister, by which I was given to understand that he had no creed. One of the inhabitants explained that all they wanted a preacher for was to marry the marriageable and bury the dead."

"There had been a death in the community a few weeks before, and the all-round man was called upon to officiate. It was his first funeral. Having told the manner of the taking off of the deceased he said to the mourning ones by way of consolation:

"His time was come and he had to go. The Lord gives and the Lord takes away, says the good book, and the man who writ it knowed that was no use buckin' for, he said right after it, Hurrah for the Lord."

"When I heard the story I felt sorry, for I wished that Bret Harte could have heard it first."

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 25c. Sold by J. Taylor Day, Hazel Green, or S. S. Combs & Son, Campton, drug stores.

The Water Shut Off.

Next Monday Kentucky river will close to through navigation, to allow thorough repairs to be made to locks Nos. 1, 2 and 3, and will remain closed for some time. Already the owners of the big peach orchards up there are looking around for transportation to the railroads of the excellent crop of fruit now ripening, and it is believed small gasoline boats will be used to ply what little water may be left in the pools thus shut off. Fishermen are anticipating a rich harvest of the finny tribe, and when the water is drawn off, what is left will not be shy on skiffs, dugouts and joe-boats. The locality involved by this shut-off is known as the peach belt of the world, the largest orchards of the fruit existing being located there, one of which has 210,000 trees. There are several of 100,000 and over, while there are numerous ones of 10,000 and over, to say nothing of orchards of 100 trees and upward.—Mt. Sterling Gazette, July 10.

Indian Tomahawks.

Crockett Coldiron, of this place, has in his possession two Indian tomahawks that are evidently the handwork of some Indian belonging to a tribe that at one time inhabited this locality. They were found on the farm recently sold by W. T. Swango to Charley Cecil. John O'hair was the original owner of the land, and a subsequent owner was a man named Musick, who planted an apple orchard. In this orchard, always known by the older inhabitants as "Musick's orchard," were found these tomahawks. One of them shows a good deal of artistic taste in its manufacture, and must have cost the artisan many hours of patient toil; that is, provided there ever existed a patient Indian. It is about three inches long by two in width, has an indentation around which the handle fitted and was picked to a fairly sharp edge for a stone. The stone, too, is harder than the rock usually found in this section, and is quite heavy for its size. It is also highly polished, and when one looks at it he can readily imagine that it was the property of some valiant chief, and believe that it was employed in battle against the first settlers of this part of Kentucky. The other "tommy" is similar in its general contour, but the poll has been broken and it does not show the workmanship displayed upon the other curio. Mr. Coldiron prizes these relics of a now almost extinct race very highly and would not part with them, or either of them, for anything in reason.

She Didn't Wear a Mask.

But her beauty was completely hidden by sores, blotches and pimples till she used Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Then they vanished as will all eruptions, fever sores, boils, ulcers, carbuncles and felons from its use. Infallible for cuts, corns, burns, scalds and piles. Care guaranteed. Price 25 cents at J. Taylor Day, Hazel Green, or S. S. Combs & Son, Campton, drug stores.

What Enterprise Does.

Dr. Waldeck, of Hazel Green, was in town Tuesday. He informed us that the C. W. B. M. sisters are making preparation to erect a large four story stone building at that place to be used instead of the academy building now being occupied. Two more professors were added to the faculty and the future prospects of the institution are more flattering than ever before.

We congratulate the people of Hazel Green on their untiring energy, long and arduous labor, and unrelenting courage in building up their town and county as they have done. These attributes of civilization and progress may well be observed as so many beacon-lights illuminating the pathway of other sections while marching on to inevitable fame and renown. May the spirits of retrogression be deeply set in inactivity.—Caney Herald.

Advertising Pays Him.

Isaac Hartfield, who represents Guggenheimer & Co., the wholesale dry goods and notions firm of Lynchburg, Va., was a guest of the Day House for a day or so last week, and sold two nice bills, viz: To S. C. Alexander, Daysboro, and John Graham, of Neola, respectively. Mr. Hartfield certainly enjoys a splendid patronage in this section and, although we do not claim the credit of his doing so to his ad in THE HERALD, he thinks it has lots to do with it, as evidenced by the fact that he keeps it before the people. But, however it may come, "Uncle Ike" deserves it, for he is one of the cleverest men that ever traveled a mountain road, and THE HERALD hopes he may live long to enjoy his popularity.

Election Tuesday, Nov. 5, 1901.

For some time past we have advocated the building of an electric road to connect Hazel Green with the Ohio and Kentucky railroad, so that the people of this section could be induced to go to Lexington to do their trading, in pursuance of a policy we have maintained ever since THE HERALD was started. Through our paper and the Morning Herald, of Lexington, we have asked the capitalists of that city to aid in the enterprise. Now, we realize that the cost of such a road, the plant to operate it, &c., would be, perhaps, more than they would care to invest—and, upon the principle that if you can't get what you want get what you can—we conclude that a horse-car line, to all intents and purposes, would answer as well. As the merchants of Lexington would get all the trade of this place and a considerable scope of country contiguous to it we would rather have Lexington capitalists back the enterprise than anybody aside from our own home people. We, therefore, gentlemen of Lexington, appeal to you to aid us in the enterprise, and if you, who are identified with her material interests, have half the zeal that we do as a native of the place and a well-wisher, you will certainly aid in building the road. It is only five miles; no grading, practically, and our people will give ground for the stables, grant you right of way, and take sufficient stock to secure the line for the five miles. What will you do? We hope your papers will publish this open letter, and that through them we may hear from you.

THOS. C. EASTERLING, formerly an attaché of THE HERALD office, and now a citizen of White Oak, Morgan county, passed through here yesterday on route to Camp-ton, where he is a delegate in the convention which meets at that place today to nominate a republican candidate for state senator. He told us that Morgan county, in convention at West Liberty on Saturday instructed for John Coffee as their choice for state senator. Mr. Coffee also got the instructions of Magoffin county, and will therefore, in all probability be the nominee of the Camp-ton convention. Personally we do not know Mr. Coffee, but he is said to be a gentleman of much magnetism and a mixer from Mixerville. He made the race against George Goad, present incumbent, for county attorney of Morgan, and run him the race of his life. We note these facts that the democratic candidate may be prepared to meet the best man in the republican party, and if he wants to beat him he must go to work.

SOME twelve years ago, before the new constitution, which throws many safeguards around the counties, and is in many ways a blow at internal development, was adopted, THE HERALD advocated the building of good roads throughout the mountain country. They could have availed of convict labor on contract by the counties and the expense would have been very small. Now, when it is a hard matter to vote aid for a road and an impossibility to use the convicts all the papers in the state are crying out for better roads. Had our suggestion obtained at the time this country would ere this have been cobwebbed with a system of roads as good or better than any in Kentucky, and the pauper counties would have been returned solvent. Some of the newspapers, like a cow's tail, are always behind. We are still for good roads, but had the press gang joined with us then the work would have been done, much of it, and the people would today be enjoying the facilities of easy road transportation. Since that time the state has paid to maintain the mountain paper counties over a million dollars, and they are still in the pauper list. Good roads would have lifted them out before or by this time. But even now every good citizen should do all he can to better our system of roads. They certainly need improving.

Modern Pills.

The day of powerful drastic pills is past and everyone who is troubled with torpidity of the liver, constipation, headache or indigestion may well be thankful that it is. Every modern family medicine chest should contain a supply of Hood's Pills, the modern cathartic. While gentle and mild in action, they are thoroughly efficient and cure biliousness, indigestion, sick headache and other troubles due to a deranged condition of the stomach, liver or bowels.

Property holders should bear in mind that J. H. Newland, of Jackson, will soon be here with several thousand feet of guttering—galvanized iron guttering—which he is prepared to put up in a workmanlike manner and guarantee at 12 cents per foot. This is something nearly every house in town needs, and there will never again be a better opportunity than now.

George Dyer, who has just returned from the army, has acquired a knowledge of physical culture and dancing—all of the latest fashions in the latter—and proposes opening a class for teaching both, in the near future, either here or at West Liberty. His post office is Neola, Ky.

At the Christian church, on Sunday the topics for the sermons, will be, at 11 a. m., "Christain Duties," and at 8:15 p. m., "Why Seek God?" Everybody has a most cordial welcome. "Come, let us worship together."

Remember the funeral of Elder Harrison Little will be preached at Daysboro, on the fifth Sunday in August, by Wm. H. Cord and Sam H. Tauber.

Spot cash will buy anything in the grocery or fruit line at Cecil & Bro's. Don't forget the place. John Pieratt's old stand. Lemons, oranges and fancy candies.

FOR SALE—A scholarship in the Commercial College of Kentucky University. By early application at this office some young man can save several dollars.

Circuit Clerk Fox, of Winchester, is drinking Swango water for his health, and has been here since Friday last.

Mrs. Alice Pieratt was taken suddenly ill last Friday night, and on Saturday was confined to her bed.

WANTED—A bright, polite boy, who can spell, read and write, to learn the printers' trade. 12 to 16 years of age. Apply at this office.

Mrs. Harlan Nickell, of the State road, above Daysboro, was visiting in our town this week.

When you have head ache or neuralgia, try Triphene. Sold by S. S. Combs & Sons, Camp-ton, and H. F. Pieratt, Hazel Green.

W. T. Swango will ship a load of hogs to Cincinnati next week.

Vitae-Ore will relieve you of all aches and pains. Agents wanted. Apply to or address, with stamp, Spencer Cooper, Hazel Green, Ky.

After all, it's the weather we get and not that which is predicted that is worrying us.

GEORGE DYER.

Who Left Here Seven Years Ago, Tells His Experience in Cuba and the Philippine Isles.

THE HERALD "man about town" met George Dyer, recently mustered out of the U. S. service, the other morning and solicited his experience in the Spanish-American and Philippine wars, in both of which he participated. After some hesitancy he submitted to an interview, which we summarized as follows:

On the 18th of April, 1896, he enlisted in the 20th U. S. infantry and left at once for Cuba, where he participated in the battles of El Caney and San Juan, coming out without a scratch. But the day after the Spanish surrendered he was stricken with a fever, put aboard the transport, Olivette, and landed in hospital at Boston, Mass., where for over four months he hovered between life and death. After leaving hospital he spent 15 days of a 30-day furlough in seeing the sights of the "Hub" city. He then rejoined his regiment, and on Dec. 23, 1899, was honorably discharged from the service.

He then engaged in civil pursuits, accepting a position as foreman of a gang of graders on a railroad near Kansas City, where he stayed four months or more, and thought he would no more a soldiering go. But a call for volunteers for the Philippine war found him again ready to buckle on the armor. This time, however, he applied for a commission. There being just 35,000 ahead of him he concluded that if he ever wore shoulder straps he'd have to win them, and determined to take his chances in the ranks.

On the 28th of August, 1900, he enlisted in the 44th U. S. infantry, and was immediately embarked to the Philippines. Arrived at Manila his regiment was dispatched to other islands for garrison duty, and he was detailed to drill recruits, with the rank of sergeant. Being away from the main part of the regiment he had no chance to push his claim for a commission or be pointed to for promotion.

But in the last big battle in which he was engaged he and five others received meritorious mention, and when congress acts in the matter the six will be awarded medals for heroic conduct in the trenches at Lyte (pronounced Ly-tee), where they made a desperate charge and routed and captured the insurgents under Gen. Mohickey. Including this fight he was in seven severe engagements and countless skirmishes, but came out unscathed.

He says the Malays, yelet the Filipino, is semi-civilized along the coast and in coast towns, but the mountainous country and general interior is inhabited by barbarians and heathens. It will be many years before military surveillance can be withdrawn and peace reign, and likewise many years will pass before even the best of them become Americanized. Indolence is indigenous to the islands, their teachings or, peradventure, their pedigree. Many beautiful women abound and American amalgamation will sooner wipe out their disposition to idleness than will a decade of display or custom without the races mixing, and this, he thinks will eventuate, as many of the Americans have cast anchor and will there remain.

He left Manila on May 25 on the transport Logan, there being something over 1800 on board, and they coaled at Nagasaki, Japan, where, he says, he witnessed the most remarkable sight he ever saw. The women work like the men, and in coaling the vessel there was a continuous stream of humanity climbing the ladders. Here a beautiful woman and behind her a man not so endowed. The mark of virtue among the women is their blackened, polished teeth. But, alas, for christianity and civilization, white teeth seemed in the majority. The scenery at and around this port was grand, and surpassed any he saw in the islands or on the voyage. Their mode of conveyance is the "rickshaw," a kind of two-wheeled cart, in which a native hitches himself and for 7¢ an hour takes you over the city in a long, sweeping trot, and points out the places of interest.

He started from there June 7, arrived at San Francisco bay on the 25th, and was mustered out at Presidio on the 30th.

From the Japanese coaling station to the end of their voyage was over the northern route, and it was so cold many of the boys hauled on their overcoats for comfort.

Mr. Dyer left San Francisco on the 5th inst. and reached home on the 11th, a week ago today. The trip involved 10,000 miles of travel, 7,000 on the sea and 3,000 by rail. His mother and father were overjoyed at his home coming, and hope he will now remain at home. He may do so, and will for a while, at least; but to a young man of health, who has withstood the hardships and escaped the shots in an honorable way, there is an irresistible fascination about soldiering that but few resist. But we'll see what we'll see.

THIS MEANS YOU.

Parents and Guardians, Attention.

The next session of Hazel Green Academy will begin on Tuesday, September 3rd, and we would be pleased to have your patronage during the session. We can promise you better instruction and facilities for work. Besides it will be cheaper in proportion to send the entire session, than to send after the holidays.

Two teachers will be added to the present force at the opening of the session, and all in all, you will be delighted at what we can give you. The rates of tuition have been changed; the following will be the rates:

In primary department, for entire session, $10.00; from Christmas till close of session, $7.00.

In academic department, for entire session, $15.00; from Christmas till close of session, $12.00.

Thus by enrolling your children on September 3rd for the session, you get 16 weeks' tuition for $5.00. Surely there could be nothing better offered, not even by the public schools. It is better for your children to be in the same school for the entire session; they are the gainers thereby. If it be possible have them enroll with us on the opening day.

All parents within four or five miles of Hazel Green can send their children each day during the fall, from their homes.

For any particulars, call on the principal, Wm. H. Cord, Hazel Green, Ky.

"I wish to truthfully state to you and the readers of these few lines that your Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is without question, the best and only cure for dyspepsia that I have ever come in contact with, and I have used many other preparations. John Beam, West Middlesex, Pa. No preparation equals Kodol Dyspepsia Cure as it contains all the natural digestants. It will digest all kinds of food and can't help but do you good. H. F. PIERATT.

Spencer Cooper, publisher and editor of THE HAZEL GREEN HERALD, and a veteran newspaper man, is getting out one of the best country newspapers we ever read. Notwithstanding his ceaseless and untiring efforts to build up his town, he is not patronized by a single home merchant with an advertising patronage from home people, and Editor Cooper certainly deserves a better patronage from the business men of Hazel Green than he is getting.—Spout Springs Times.

It is easier to keep well than get cured. DeWitt's Little Early Risers taken now and then, will always keep your bowels in perfect order. They never gripe but promote an easy gentle action.

Miss Lillian Evans, of this place, has secured the Spruce Gap school to teach, and opened for books on Monday. Miss Lillian is quite a favorite here, and her many friends hope she may have a pleasant time in teaching the young idea how to shoot. She taught the Gillmore school last year and gave very general satisfaction. Hers is a sunny disposition and that her scholars will love her is assured, for none know her but to love her.

You can never cure dyspepsia by dieting. What your body needs is plenty of good food, properly digested. Then if your stomach will not digest it, Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will. It contains all of the natural digestants, hence must digest every class of food and so prepare it that nature can use it in nourishing the body and replacing the wasted tissues, thus giving life, health, strength and healthy appetite.

A Peculiar Case.

S. S. Combs, of Camp-ton, is suffering with a swollen hand from some unknown cause. He was last week stricken with a pain in the palm of his hand which ran through to the back, and was accompanied by swelling. Without a scratch, bite, cut or sting the pain came, and was so severe that he could neither sleep or eat. A red spot about the size of a silver dollar appeared on his hand, but he can not remember of straining it, even, to account for the trouble. Charcoal and something else is kept upon the wound lest blood poison set up, but nothing seems to alleviate the pain. His daughter Mrs. Pieratt, and her husband, of this place, went over Thursday of last week, and stayed all night with Mr. Combs, and they say he had no rest during Thursday night. His many friends hope nothing serious will result but at the same time feel much anxiety.

A Hard Luck Story.

Once more we appeal to those of our subscribers who are in arrears to come in and pay up. We owe other people and want to pay them but unless those who owe us pay we can not pay those we owe. And, furthermore, we are dependent upon the income from the paper to pay the expenses of printing it. Hence, unless you pay we can not print it. This is plain enough for any child to comprehend, and we do hope everybody who owes us will pay so we can pay everybody we owe. We don't like to feel when we meet a man that he is saying to himself, "Cooper owes me 47 cents and it looks like I never can get it." Now, if you will pay us we can pay him the 47 cents, or any other sum. If you don't pay us we'll have to stop printing your paper—we can save that expense any how.

CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

I have been selling perfumes for the past six months. I make them myself at home and sell to friends and neighbors. Have made $710. Every one buys a bottle. For 50 cents worth of material I make perfume that would cost $2.00 in drug stores. I first made it for my own use only, but the curiosity of friends as to where I procured such exquisite odors, prompted me to sell it. I clear from $25 to $35 per week. I do not canvass, people come and send to me for the perfumes. Any intelligent person can do as well as I do. For 42 cents in stamps I will send you the formula for making all kinds of perfumes and a sample bottle prepaid. I will also help you get started in business. Those famous little pills, Dr. Witt's Little Early Risers, compel your liver and bowels to do their duty, thus giving you pure, rich blood to recuperate your body. Are easy to take. Never gripe.

SUNNY SIDE.

Miss Carrie Swango was visiting this place Tuesday and Wednesday of last week.

S. C. Alexander and wife, of Daysboro, passed through here Sunday on their way to Maytown.

Maud Taulbee, of Daysboro, was the guest of ye scribe one night last week. She has just returned from a protracted visit to Frenchburg.

Misses Lula and Maud Taulbee and Mollie Oney, Wm. Alexander and Calaway Sebastian visited the famous Swango Springs Sunday, and a good time in general was the result.

John Bays, of White Oak, passed through here Sunday en route home. He told us that he would teach a public school in Floyd county, and attended the institute at Jackson. What's the attraction John?

We were glad to learn that our young friend and cousin, John Henry Taulbee, of the heights, had succeeded in getting a good position in Frankfort. John is a straight-forward, honest boy, and they are the kind that get there. Success to you, John.

Going to the office on Thursday evening last what a surprise awaited us! When the postmaster handed us our mail, among it was a nice large 7-column paper, neatly printed.

On looking at the head lines we read these words, THE HAZEL GREEN HERALD. And seeing these words we were almost dumbfounded, we were so surprised! We know our eyes must have been twice their natural size; we were so intoxicated with wonder that reason for a moment fled. At first we thought we were in spirit land or dreaming. But when our eyes opened and reason was again on her throne we found that this was no phenomenon. We had not been dreaming for this paper, long the adored child of the mountains and idolized baby of the editor's heart had actually grown to twice its natural size. When we realized that Mr. Cooper's baby was standing before us, no longer a baby but a full grown youth of 17 summers, we stood mute and almost transfixed. And, what was more surprising, it was actually filled with home advertisements and letters from the "Cow Boy" and other correspondents, whose literary genius is almost unbounded.

Also, Mrs. Moses, in the "Courtsey Missionary Tidings." It seemed that we were in the gallery of spiritual ideas, where we met Evangeline and Hypatia and all the dream faces that ever stood before the soul of genius. May the Goddess of Fortune smile more sweetly on this fair youth in the future than in the past; may the muses string their lyres and the poets sing it peans; may historians pay tribute to this noble scion, and orators wax eloquent in speaking its praise. And, lastly, may it live enshrined in the hearts of its many, many readers as "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

Poul Play Suspected.

Kiser Wilson, who is well known about here, was prospecting in the west during the early spring and, after spending a few days with Jimmie and Robert Day, on their ranch 12 miles from Midland, Texas, he bought a team and wagon at that place and set out alone overland for Bates county, Mo., where he had relatives. That was two months ago, and he has never been heard of or from since that time. It now transpires that en route he had to travel four days between human habitations. For this he prepared before leaving Midland, having laid in a supply of provisions, &c., to last him until he should pass through this wilderness, and at some place along this lonely route it is now feared that he was murdered and robbed. As corroborative of this theory, Geo. Oldfield, who removed from the west a few years ago, owns a set of double harness that was taken from a pair of horses found in that section of wild country he had to traverse and sold, and the owner now his body was ever found. Mr. Oldfield says the spot had a specially bad reputation and thinks there can be no doubt of Mr. Wilson's fate. Kiser had about $1,700 when he left Mt. Sterling, and out of this he paid for his outfit at Midland. Letters of inquiry have been sent to everybody in the west where Mr. Wilson might possibly have stopped if he passed through the bad lands, but not a word can be heard of him after he left Midland. His brother, Henry Wilson, of Mt. Sterling, has our sympathy, and we hope the missing man may yet be heard from.

The piles that annoy you so will be quickly and permanently healed if you use Dewitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Beware of worthless counterfeits.

George McClain and wife and his sister, Mrs. Eliza Easter, arrived here Tuesday for a few weeks' visit to relatives and friends. Mr. McClain and his sister, whose maiden name was Eliza McClain, left here in 1886, the former going to Kansas and the latter to Paris, Ill., where she married Louis Easter, some 12 or 13 years ago. Mr. McClain also married, his wife being a lady of St. Joe, Mo. He was in the race for the opening of Oklahoma in 1889, and located a claim five miles west of Stillwater, where he has since lived. He is now in the real estate business, and, as one of our citizens suggested a day or so since, has grown quite wealthy if his purse compares with his physique, which is decidedly plethoric.

The A. T. Morris Wholesale House, Cincinnati, has placed us under obligations for a box of fine cigars, "The Village Belle," and they are, indeed, an enjoyable smoke. They are made of three-year-old natural leaf, but smoke as sweet as a newly made cigar, and every lover of a good cigar knows that a new cigar gives the sweetest smoke. Merchants who want something nice for their trade should write this firm.

in the history of the town of Hazel Green, Ky. The enrollment of the school 69 pupils, and 12 came from the community and country adjacent, thus leaving 167 who came from some distance. There is no more popular school in Eastern Kentucky, and its popularity is growing beyond Eastern Kentucky.

Because of the urgent demand the C. W. B. M. has already determined to erect new buildings for both academy and boarding. Just as soon as possible the contract will be let for a new three-story stone or brick, academy building with basement. The basement will contain furnace, coal, dairy, laundry, and press rooms. The first floor will have library, office, music and recitation rooms. The second floor will have the assembly hall with a seating capacity of 500, and recitation rooms. The third floor will contain sleeping rooms for young men. It is the purpose to complete this building by December of this year.

A large dining hall and kitchen with other suitable rooms, will be erected where young men and women will take their meals. A number of four room cottages will be erected, where the young women will have their rooms.

Other cottages will be erected and let to young women and families who want to do their own providing, etc., while attending the school. As much of this building as possible will be done between now and the beginning of the second term—January 1, 1902.

Pending the erection of the new buildings the school work will be carried on in the present academy, and boarders will be taken care of as heretofore. Ample accommodations will be provided for all who may attend the academy beginning Tuesday, September 2nd.

The citizens of Hazel Green and vicinity purchased and donated to June, Sept. 8, C. W. B. M. a three-acre campus for the school.

Upon this campus all the new buildings will be erected. The site selected will be one of the most beautiful in Eastern Kentucky.

When the improvements contemplated are put upon it, it will be a fine place.

Time Table, are put upon it.

EASE are sure.

and what will be done for us, by sending their children and wards to Hazel Green academy.

Two additional teachers will be added to the faculty in September, and during eight weeks of the second term work will be done in the normal department by a special normal instructor. A course of lectures will be arranged for November, January, March and May. Everything possible will be done to make this the school of the mountains. The commercial department will be in charge of one especially prepared for such work. Young men and women may obtain in this department just what they would get at large business colleges, and at much less expense.

The musical department will still be made a special feature of the school's work.

All in all, the outlook for Hazel Green academy is bright, and we confidently expect an annual enrollment of 500 students within from three to five years.

"I am indebted to One Minute Cough Cure for my present good health and my life. I was so nervous, venturing along the creek track, no signs of the body were visible beneath the live-oak. The wolves and buzzards had well done their loathsome work. Gradually matters worked back to the old routine. Devereux again took to spending his leisure evenings in the society of Isabella Martinez; I, too, using them for the fishing and shooting that had always been my favorite pastimes.

Martinez had substantiated a claim to the grey pony by a judicious payment to the county authorities, as represented by the sheriff. Hart's disappearance, owing to his having no relatives in the state, had passed almost unnoticed amongst our scant and busy population.

Some four months had passed by, when one evening my old hound, Rip, treed a 'coon in a hollow cypress on the edge of Muddy creek, not fifty yards from the spot where we had found Hart's body. In the excitement of the chase I gave not a second thought to the locality, but eagerly set to work to smoke out my quarry, stuffing into the hollow trunk bundles of smouldering grass and Spanish moss.

Whilst thus engaged, the stillness of the dusky forest was broken by the rapid thud on the soft ground of the feet of a loping pony. Glancing up, the last clear rays of twilight showed me, fast approaching down the creek track, the grey pony, with Martinez in the saddle. Convinced as I was of the old man's guilt, a vague wonder seized me at his hardihood in passing the very scene of his crime on the self-same animal which had borne the murdered man.

On they came, till opposite the great live-oak, when suddenly the

ENTERPRISE OF HAZEL GREEN.

BY SAM WILSON.

No doubt you've heard some people howl about their city's size.

With factories that are numerous—For business enterprise.

But let them blow their bugles free All over this earthly plain

While I for one will tune my lyre, And sing a new refrain.

I boast to-day of Hazel Green, A place of much renown;

On Kentucky's soil there's not a spot That's fairer than this town!

Yes, let them blow their bugles loud, Their railroad music free,

But soon there'll be an iron horse Pass near Hazel Green! You see?

I boast to-day of Hazel Green, And sweetest music bring;

And let it wait to all the world The famous Swango's spring.

A better draught was never quaffed By invalid's lips on earth;

Its curative powers never tails To give the weak new birth.

I boast to-day of Hazel Green With its fine millinery store;

'Tis filled with lovely novelties, Which all the girls adore;

Where fashionable hats of peerless style Are beautiful to behold;

And when you purchase one, you'll say No finer could be sold.

I boast to-day of Hazel Green, Its two commodious mills

Are running on day after day, Encompassed by the hills

That look with beauty over the scene, And gives this peerless place

A richer, brighter, purer glow Than other towns can grace.

I boast to-day of Hazel Green, To beat it 'twould be hard;

For let another enterprise have come— It is a lumber yard,

Owned by that business man of note, So builders have a chat;

When you want lumber, go at once And see H. F. Pieratt.

I boast to-day of Hazel Green, And its dear mountain sheet

With Spencer Cooper as editor, THE HERALD'S hard to beat.

Come, one and all, a dollar send, And you'll receive today

A coupon with a chance to win A fortune in this way.

I boast to-day of Hazel Green, And of its college grand,

The best and brightest school that stands Upon Kentucky's land;

Where erogenous youth are reared, and when a very few minutes convinced me that Martinez was quite dead. Yet what could be the cause? The fall on the soft ground was a mere nothing, neither was there any sign of kick or blow. I left the ill-omened spot and hurried home afoot, where by good luck I found Devereux, and told him what had occurred. He was all anxiety for his sweetheart, and suggested that, whilst he went over and prepared to have sustained shock, and kept rushing to his neck as if it pained him.

Not a word could I get out of him; so, lifting him into Texas' saddle, I soon had him home at Lake Stella, when I dosed him with brandy, and made him bathe his head in cold water. Suddenly he turned to me abruptly and said:

"Fenton, do you believe a dead man can have power to harm a living one?"

Not knowing what to say, I kept silence, and he went on:

"As sure as I live, just as I passed the oak, someone or something sprang from the shadows into the saddle behind me, clutched me with icy fingers around the neck, and began slowly strangling me. The pony, as you saw, bolted, but it was not till I lost consciousness and fell from his back that the horrible grasp was slackened. I don't know what it was, nor do I want to; but this I do know—that never again will I ride the grey."

He was quite right, for the poor little beast never appeared that night at the pasture-gate, and when next day we followed his trail, we found him many miles away, lying dead on the edge of a great gloomy swamp, ridden to death by the ghost or fiend that I had ended the life of one rider, and even in death, seemed still to covet the cause of the cutting short of his own earthly life.—Good Times.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 25c. Sold by J. Taylor Day, Hazel Green, or S. S. Combs & Son, Campton, drug stores.

While I for one will tune my lyre,
And sing a new refrain.

I boast to-day of Hazel Green,
A place of much renown;
On Kentucky's soil there's not a spot
That's fairer than this town!
Yes, let them blow their bugles loud,
Their railroad music free,
But soon there'll be an iron horse
Pass near Hazel Green. You see?

I boast to-day of Hazel Green,
And sweetest music bring,
And let it wait to all the world
The famous Swango's Spring.
A better draught was never quaffed
By invalid's lips on earth.
Its curative powers never fails
To give the weak new birth.

I boast to-day of Hazel Green
With its fine millinery store;
Tis filled with lovely novelties,
Which all the girls adore,
Where fashionable hats of peerless style
Are beautiful to behold;
And when you purchase one, you'll say
No finer could be sold.

I boast to-day of Hazel Green,
Its two commodious mills
Are running on day after day,
Encircled by the hills
That look with beauty o'er the scene,
And gives this peerless place
A richer, brighter, purer glow
Than other towns can grace.

I boast to-day of Hazel Green,
To beat it 'twill be hard;
For lo! another enterprise has come—
It is a lumber yard,
Owned by that business man of men,
So builders have a chat;
When you want lumber, go at once
And see H. F. Pieratt.

I boast to-day of Hazel Green,
And its dear mountain sheet
With Spencer Cooper as editor,
THE HERALD's hard to beat,
Come, one and all, a dollar send,
And you'll receive today
A coupon with a chance to win
A fortune in this way.

I boast to-day of Hazel Green,
And of its college grand,
The best and brightest school that stands
Upon Kentucky's land;
Where grows

The investigation of Mr. Neely up to date has cost the government $50,000. We don't know, but we think that there is cause for an investigation of the investigators.

The Cuban cartoonists are lambasting Platt, of New York, instead of Platt of Connecticut. However, Tom Platt can't well get his too many.

You can't get good results from good building material and poor workmanship.

And you can't get good results from good workmanship and poor material.

But you can get good results if the material is the best and the workmen the most skilled.

OUR SEVENTEENTH ANNIVERSARY.

BY W. J. LAMPTON.

Here's to THE HERALD of Hazel Green, Here's to the paper whose issues mean more to the county and people's good than years of all other labor would.

Not as great, perhaps, as some papers are—They may be suns, it is only a star—But it shines always and its brilliance leads to broader fields and to higher creeds.

It has its weaknesses—who has not? Who is the perfect one? Who has got a right to condemn? It's enough if we get there oftener than we do not. See?

That is THE HERALD. Not the greatest, yet None the less willing and ready to let its light so shine that its guiding rays may lead to knowledge and its wider ways. It is to take, to have and to hold. As something greater and better than gold. Something to guide and to teach; to find ears for the deaf and eyes for the blind.

Then here's to THE HERALD, the people's friend, The one good thing that should not end; And men and women, far and near, Should be thankful it's only one dollar a year.

The attention of our readers is respectfully directed to the advertisement of Combs Lumber Co., which appears on the 4th page of our paper today. The members of this company are all mountain men and all of one family, the father being a native of Breathitt county, and all the boys being natives of the mountains. At Cornwell, in Menefee county, Alfred Combs & Sons were engaged in the mercantile business, and made a success. They sold out, went to Lexington and engaged in the lumber and contracting business. That they have made a success beyond their most sanguine anticipations is a fact that may be illustrated by the further fact that out of 300 or more homes to be built in Lexington this summer they have the contract for more than half of them. Good lumber, good work and keeping these facts before the people by advertising constantly has brought about their success. When you need anything in their line be sure to see them.

J. H. Newland, of Jackson, was in town this week in the interest of his tin shop. Mr. Newland is prepared to put on iron, tin and galvanized roofing and guttering, and his prices are such that it will pay

Sam Kash, of Stillwater, has been employed to teach the Anyx school on Red river; Kelly Kash will teach the upper Gillmore school, Eli Kash the upper Lacy creek, Will Kash the lower Lacy creek, and Daniel Kash the Landsaw school. There has been a great deal of "Kash" used in getting these schools, but the lower Lacy creek school certainly got the largest "Bill."

The following persons of this section and other points were the guests of A. B. Swango and family Sunday, viz: Henry Cecil, Henry Ward, Leroy Boggs, A. T. Brooks, Edward Oney and sister, Josie Swango and daughter, and judging from what they say about the gravy, the foxes did not get all their chickens, and they also speak in high terms of the way they were entertained, and only wish that the time may soon come when they can go back again.
